

Duckietown Duckumentation Terms of Use

Version 1.2

This is an informal summary of the Duckietown Documentation Terms of Use. You can find the complete formal text at the page <https://www.duckietown.org/terms-of-use>.

1. Personal use

You may reproduce and print this documentation in HTML and PDF formats for personal use.

2. Use in credit-granting classes at accredited institutions

You may use the Duckietown Documentation as a teaching aid in credit-granting classes at accredited institutions.

You may modify the Duckietown Documentation and make it available to your students in a modified form.

In such cases, we ask that you advertise the documentation as a modified version, with an advice of the type:

"This is a customization of the Duckietown Documentation by <YOUR NAME> for the class <YOUR CLASS>. Please see docs.duckietown.org for the original version."

3. Use in commercial products or services

You may not use this documentation in a commercial enterprise and you may not use the name "Duckietown" or our logo connected to a commercial enterprise without written authorization of the Duckietown Foundation.

If you would like to use this documentation in a commercial endeavor, you must contact us to work out a licensing agreement. The revenue from these licensing agreements will go to the Duckietown Foundation in order to provide technical improvements, technical support, and to increase the distribution of the Duckietown Platform.

4. Citing this documentation

Please use this format for citing the documentation:

Duckietown Duckumentation - "Book name". 2018. Available at <http://docs.duckietown.org>.

5. Contributions

We welcome contributions and are happy to incorporate them. We ask you that you assign the copyright to us, so that we may release all documentation under the same terms and it is easy for us to enforce the guidelines above.
